FY2022 Investment Returns

On September 7, 2022, IPERS announced that its investment portfolio returned -3.90% for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2022, beating its policy benchmark by 0.15%. IPERS' Trust Fund value equaled $40.13 billion at the conclusion of FY2022, a decrease of $2.72 billion from the end of FY2021.

IPERS CEO Greg Samorajski said, "IPERS is never pleased with a year of negative returns. Still, this year's results are understandable given the factors that continue to challenge all investors. These include record inflation, ongoing unrest in Europe, rising interest rates and the sharp decline in the global equity and fixed income markets. IPERS weathered this difficult market year with better results in its real estate, private equity, private fixed income and absolute return investments. Institutional investors know that down-markets are inevitable. IPERS has crafted a long-term investment strategy designed to tolerate fluctuations in the market. IPERS remains a strong, well-funded retirement plan."
